INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Indianapolis Colts quarterback Anthony Richardson is considered day-to-day with a dislocated pinkie, a person with knowledge of the injury told The Associated Press on Friday.

The person spoke to the AP on condition of anonymity because the team hadn't yet made an official statement.

It's unclear when Richardson will practice next. Indy did not hold practice Friday and is scheduled to do so Saturday in Westfield, Indiana, a suburb on Indianapolis' northwest side.

Richardson was injured on the second possession of the Colts' preseason game against the Ravens on Thursday night. He was driven into the ground by unblocked Baltimore Ravens linebacker David Ojabo. When Richardson got up, he saw his finger at an awkward angle and immediately left the game. He did not return.

Coach Shane Steichen said the finger popped out of place and trainers popped it back in.

"I just looked down and I see my finger, different direction, and I'm like, 'Maybe I'm tripping,'" Richardson said. "I looked at it again, and it was definately like that."

Richardson attempted to grip the ball on the sideline but said it didn't quite feel right.

That meant Daniel Jones, who is battling Richardson for Indy's starting job, got more action than expected. Steichen said after the game that he would consider changing his script for next Saturday's game against Green Bay. Jones was expected to start that game, likely taking more snaps than Richardson.

Richardson, the No. 4 overall pick in the 2022 NFL draft, has battled a series of injuries through his first two seasons. He's played in just 16 of 34 games, missing all but two because of injury. Richardson also has been unable to finish several additional games.

The stops and starts have hindered Richardson's development. He completed 47.7% of his throws last season, the lowest percentage among regular starters.

Jones signed a one-year, $14 million contract during the offseason. He was added to compete with Richardson after spending his first six seasons with the New York Giants. He was released during last season and signed with the Minnesota Vikings but did not take an official snap.

Celtics' coach signs contract extension

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Celtics president Brad Stevens has said throughout the offseason that that team wanted Joe Mazzulla to be its coach for a long time.

It made that more than a proclamation Friday, announcing it has signed Mazzulla to a multi-year contract extension. Length and details of the new deal were not released.

In a statement, Mazzulla called his new pact with the team "a blessing."

"I would not be here without my faith, my wife, and my children," Mazzulla said. "We are thankful for the partnership with our ownership groups, Brad's mentorship, and the support of our staff. Most importantly, I am grateful for the players I have been able to coach the past three seasons. I look forward to competing for the Celtics and the city of Boston."

Mazzulla, 37, is coming off his third season as Boston's coach and has guided the team to the playoffs each season, including the franchise's 18th NBA title to cap the 2023-24 season. He was the youngest head coach to win the NBA Finals since the 1968-69 season, when 35-year-old Bill Russell led the Celtics to the championship as a player-coach.

Under Mazzulla, the Celtics have won at least 57 games each of those seasons and topped 60 victories in each of the last two.

Though Stevens has never publicly discussed the details of Mazzulla's contract, the coach was initially given an extension shortly after having the interim tag lifted in February 2023. Stevens confirmed in June that Mazzulla had received at least one additional extension prior to his latest one.

"He understands the job and has a passion for the Celtics that is only rivaled by our most die-hard fans," Stevens said in a statement. "He's worked hard and accomplished amazing things in his first three years as a head coach—including averaging over 60 wins per season and winning the 2024 NBA Championship. Joe is a gifted leader who brings a consistent commitment to learning, improving, and maximizing each day we get to compete for the Boston Celtics."

Mazzulla originally joined the Celtics in 2019 and spent the next three seasons as an assistant before being interim head coach after former boss Ime Udoka was suspended by the team prior to the start of the 2022-23 season.
