The church became the German Evangelical Church.

However, by 1914, the second and third generations were speaking English and worshipping elsewhere because they didn’t understand German.

“That’s when the property was transferred to the Church of Christ,” Moore said. “They used it until 1976 when attendance was down to a few members so they deeded the property over th the newly formed Rock Creek Valley Historical Society.”

The church became the main museum building for many years, until the completion of the new buildings. Exhibits remained there until 2017, when the church was listed on the state and national historical registries.

One of the main reasons, Moore said, was the window styles. Those appear in only two other buildings remaining in Westmoreland – the old courthouse and the old GAR building. “All three were built within about a five year period between about 1882 and 1887,” she said.

The listing did, however, impart some stringent rules when doing renovations, which the old church urgently needed.

Moore said the windows frames were rotting at the panes beginning to fall out. The building also required new roofing and guttering and repairs to the stonework. Finally, new electrical and HVAC work was done, along with restoring the interior lathe and plaster, tin ceiling and wooding flooring.

The project was expensive, totaling $113,000. Most of that went to the windows, masonry and interior work.

The historical society obtained a $50,000 State of Kansas Heritage Fund Grant and tax credits of $11,300. The remaining $51,700 was raised from interested businesses and individuals. Moore recognized those individuals by asking any in attendance to stand.

Restoration contractors included: The Specialist – Roy and Lori Hanni; Hartman Masonry – Chris Hartman; Fleming Brothers Construction – Brandon Fleming; Valburg Electric – David Valburg; and Precision Plumbing, Heating and Cooling – Travis Figge.

The church is part of the Rock Creek Valley Historical Society Museum Complex. The complex is open May-October 1-4 p.m., Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays, and by appointment.

be subjected to regular testing, limit distractions, and may not be under the influence of any drug. Any driving incident must be reported to the city within 24 hours.

The update to the personnel policy shows the definition of a full time employee is 40 hours a week, any key given may not be copied, and the police department is transferring to a different scheduling system. This means employees would work 12 hour shifts with 2 days on, 2 off, 3 on, then the pattern flips.

The Columbian’s lease with the city is also shifting. It will now match the maintenance agreement with the library, with the city taking on replacements within the building. This raises the rent to $300 a month.

WAMEGO HEALTH CENTER

Brian Howells, administrator at the Wamego Health Center, updated the commission as June 30 concluded the fiscal year.

The hospital has financially been in the black for 11 out of the past 12 months. This is “fantastic for a rural hospital,” according to Howells, citing how 18 rural hospitals across the states closed their doors already in the past year.

The new MRI machine has surpassed its return on investment of 50 scans a month by five. The retention rate of staff this year is 89%. Satisfaction rates have also risen to 67% in emergency and 77% overall.

Low dose cancer screens will soon be offered alongside pelvic floor therapy, urology, water therapy at the pool, and a PET/CT mobile vehicle.

The hospital also participated in community events including Classrooms to Careers with the local 4th graders, scholarships for the high school, and even won in a Boomtown decorating contest.

Expansions are soon to be expected with additional in and outpatient treatment, specialists, and space in operating rooms to accommodate more complex procedures.

Weather delays Flush Road widening project

Due to weather issues, the widening project on Flush Road has been delayed, Public Works Administrator Tim Eisenbarth on Monday informed the county commission.

Eisenbarth also updated commissioners on other projects, including a bridge Everyg will be installing a on Emmett Road near Jeffrey Energy Center.

Everyg will cover the installation cost, with the county taking responsibility for maintenance and repair. If Everyg were to no longer operate within Jeffery Energy Center and decommission the rail spur, the company would reimburse the county for its removal and reconstruction of the road.

A repair project was also approved for a storm sewer on Eagle’s Landing Drive in Manhattan.

This allows for a survey of the area, a design plan, and eventually bidding on the project. “Quite a bit of drainage goes into this inlet,” according to Eisenbarth. The quantity of the drainage has eaten away at the embankment of the river it lets out in. “The scope of the work isn’t huge but it’s something we need to get done,” said Eisenbarth.

FINANCE UPDATE

Heather Gladbach updated the commission on finances for the second quarter of the year.

She said 98% of Ad Valorem taxes have been collected, matching 2024’s precinct. Fifty-nine percent of Retailer’s Sales and Compensating tax has also been collected, increasing $77,225 from last year. Interest Income has also increased $211,469.

Forty-two % of the operthrough sometimes. In Topeka, there’s some of that negative sentiment. That really affects our ability to recruit teachers and get people into the profession. I think that’s one of the biggest challenges in the state.”

To fight that on a local level, Meyer said it was important for the district “to get the word about about what we’re doing and the successes that we have. (For example) I was just looking at Wamego’s test scores a little while ating cost budget has been used including personal services, contractual services and commodities. Thirty % of the non-operating cost budget has also been spent. This includes capital outlay, allocations, grant expenditures, and transfers.

This adds up to 39.21% of the 2025 General Fund budget being spent.

Commission Chair Terry Force thanked her, “we really appreciate what you come down and do for us.”

MEETING CANCELED

As there is no business needing to be conducted, at this time there is no meeting scheduled for Monday, July 28.

COMMISSIONER UPDATES

• Dee McKee has a reported a “busy week of meetings.” She continued to work with ATA buses, ago, and they’re fantastic.”

Meyer has been in Wamego for just two weeks, and is beginning to get involved in various organizations. He thinks visibility is important, as is the involvement of everyone in the school district. He noted site councils as an excellent place for parent participation and he wants them to be inclusive.

On a personal note, Meyer says most family activities revolve around their kids’ school activities ans summer activities.

working to get access for those who need rides at an effective cost. She also attended planning commission, workforce board, and flint hills regional council meetings.

• Merl Page had “nothing to report” on his end.

• Bill Drew attended a Kaw Valley Chamber of Commerce meeting as well as a planning commission meeting. He dove deeper into the quarter-quarter rule and made clear that there is “no easy solution.”

• Gary Yenzer attended an Eco-Devo as well as a Planning and Zoning meeting.

• Force touched base with the Eco-Devo, Planning and Zoning Commission, and Emergency Planning meeting. He stated that seeing all the departments partner “brings more credence that we all need to work together.”

“I also like to golf,” he said, adding he was recently on the Wamego course and “it humbled me.”

As a new superintendent, Meyer said he’d like Wamego to know, “I’m here to learn what this community wants out of their school district and to make this district as good as it can be.

“I’ve got good, solid experience coming from St. John,” he continued, “and I hope that I can use that experience to move this district forward.”
