Letter to the Editor

I know I am old, but I'm not ready to die yet.

I am utterly appalled at the number of drivers in this nice town of ours who have no regard for laws. I have written about this a couple of times before. But, I am hopeful that this time one of those law breakers will read and understand what I am saying.

In recent months, I have seen drivers completely blow by most, and I mean most, of the stop signs bordering our Main Street.

What makes them feel so special that the safety and lives of others are less important than stopping at a stop sign?

I often travel to Manhattan and, when at all possible, I avoid driving to and from during go-to-work and come-home hours. I may go a little over 65 mph, but mostly wonder how much faster others are going. It is nothing to be passed on hills, curves and double yellow lines.

I realize their life may be of little value to some, but I love my life and those of my family and friends.

Please think about others. The life you could possibly harm could be one of your loved ones.

Please think of others and respect them; it's the decent and right thing to do.

Helen Martin
