5 Smart Money Moves For Parents Before the School Bell Rings

By Steven Johnson, Kansas State Treasurer

New school routines, fresh supplies, and busy schedules put education on every family's mind. As Kansas students head back to classrooms in August, State Treasurer Steven Johnson is reminding parents that back-to-school season is also a good time to think ahead about future education costs, even for children who haven't started kindergarten yet.

"Back-to-school season is a great reminder to start planning for a child's future education expenses," said Johnson. "Whether your child is a toddler, a kindergartener, or even a high school freshman, opening a Quest529 account now gives your savings additional time to benefit from potential investment growth."

Starting early means there is more time to work toward a child's education savings goal. Even small, consistent contributions can add up by the time they're ready for college, trade school, an apprenticeship, or whatever comes after high school.

Five steps Kansas parents can take now:

1. Open a Quest529 account. Starting early means there is more time to make contributions before education expenses begin, while allowing potential investment earnings the opportunity to compound over time.
2. Set up automatic monthly contributions, even in small amounts, to build a consistent savings habit.
3. Invite grandparents and other family members to contribute through Quest529's online gifting tool, an easy way to turn birthdays and holidays into education savings.
4. Take advantage of Kansas' state income tax deduction on Quest529 contributions.
5. Revisit the account each school year. Checking in regularly helps ensure the account's investment approach aligns with a family's long term education savings goals.

As Kansas families settle into a new school year, Johnson encourages parents to add education savings to their back-to-school checklist. Even a small investment today can make a meaningful difference as education goals become a reality.
