Homecoming Traditions Grow: Sentinel-Times Invites Community Support to Expand Student Recognition Across County

As Homecoming season approaches, the Sentinel-Times looks forward to celebrating students at three of the schools we now cover — Stockton, Plainville, and Palco. Natoma does not celebrate a fall Homecoming.

With our expanded coverage area comes something we are learning along the way: not everything can be done the same at every school, at least not all at once.

For more than half a century, a Stockton Homecoming tradition has been recognizing fall student-athletes individually in the newspaper. Each student is pictured individually, along with his or her sport, class, parents, and the name of a business or individual who has sponsored that student's recognition.

It is a tradition that generations of Stockton families have enjoyed, and one we did not feel right discontinuing.

At the same time, we want to make one thing very clear: we would like to do the same thing for Plainville and Palco.

However, these individual student features are only possible with sponsorship support from area businesses, organizations, and individuals. With the number of student-athletes in-

Palco's Ag Engineering & Technology Class Ready to "Take Off" with New Drone Program

Palco High School Receives $80,210 USDA Grant for Technology, Equipment, & Classroom Renovations

By VIRGI LASKA
Sentinel-Times

The Palco Ag Engineering and Technology class is ready to "take off" with an exciting new program designed to introduce students to the growing world of drone technology.

The program received a major boost with an $80,210.00 grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). The funding will help renovate the classroom, update desks and other classroom equipment, and purchase flight simulators, drones and other equipment needed to develop the program.

The idea began last year while the students were attending a field demonstration that was being sponsored by PAC Leader Technology located in Morland, Ks. where a drone was being used. Later in the school year, Rooks County Emergency Management Director Adam Bryant visited area schools to demonstrate how drones can be used to assist communities in a variety of ways. These programs helped open the doors to a new educational opportunity for students.

Following the demonstrations, Greg Hamel, director of the Ag Center in Palco, contacted Donna Hudson-Hamilton for assistance in writing a grant application to

Heart of a Tiger: How Corbyn Marquess Turned Golf Into Hope for Sick Kids

Corbyn Marquess loves three things with her whole heart: helping people, her hometown of Plainville, and golf. Over the past two summers, she has found a way to bring all three together. The results have been nothing short of amazing.

Corbyn is a senior at Fort Hays State University, where she is studying to become a speech-language pathologist. Speech-language pathologists help people with challenges involving speaking, swallowing, and communication. Last spring, Corbyn received exciting news: she was accepted into FHSU's fast-track master's program, allowing her to begin work toward her graduate degree sooner. It is a major step toward her dream career.

Golf has been part of Corbyn's life since she was 10 years old. She began playing competitively at age 12 and spent three years on her high school golf team. She competed in tournaments throughout Kansas and on tours outside the state before continuing her golf career at Fort Hays State for a time.

But before Corbyn became a college student, fundraiser organizer, and future SLP, she learned firsthand what it means to face a frightening health challenge.

During her junior year of high school, Corbyn woke up one morning before a golf tournament with a large lump in her throat and pain on one side of her face. Her family went to the doctor, and she was sent directly to Children's Mercy in Kansas City for testing. A biopsy revealed that the lump was malignant.

Corbyn was diagnosed with thyroid cancer. She un-
