Letter From The Editor:

by Brandon Merriman

I was unable to attend the presentation put on by Joe Harder this weekend at the Historical Society. I was fortunate enough though that the Histori- cal Society videoed the presentation. I listened to the presentation on the way to the airport at 2AM Monday. It really got me thinking throughout it, just how much history and changes several of our community members has seen. I think of Joe and all of the advancements that printing and newspapers have made of the years. I also think of Joe and think about all of the history he has seen and the history of Onaga he has seen. Everywhere from the glo- ry years of Onaga sports with Coach Rosenfield, to the grocery store burning down, to the present day Onaga. I also think about all of the same chang- ing guys like Bob Venneberg, Dr. Walsh, Charlie Lowry, and not to mention all the local farmers and the changes in technology they have witnessed. Bob for instance has been working on cars for sev- eral years, think of how much cars have changed all over the years. Think of all the cars that have came into that building and think of all the stories of the different cars in that shop. When Bob first started I am sure most of those cars were manuals and now probably about 98% of those cars are automatic transmissions. Then it makes you think of modern medicine and how we got here today. I am sure from the days of Dr. Walsh hearing his fa- ther talk about the doctor field compared to what he saw throughout his time was an undertak- ing. Even the last five to six years have had huge advancements in the medical field. Then you go to Charlie Lowry who again started in the field as a meat cutter several years ago and now con- tinues the same career. Just how much has each of those fields changed. Technology has certainly changed throughout the years. It makes you wonder where we will be as a society in 5,10,25,50,75 years from now. One of the comments at the end of Joe's presentation was that the youngsters now away days don't even know their grandparents nor their stories. I was fortunate to have gotten to hear several stories from our grandparents and spend several hours with them over the years. That included my wife's grandparents, I was fortunate enough to had met all of her grandparents as well. We are still fortunate to get to visit a few of her grandparents today. One of those being the kids Nana who they love visit- ing and getting to spend time with. It is great to hear several of the stories from her and when we are around all of her brothers and sisters it is great to hear those as well. We have unfortunately lost a few great family mem- bers that we were fortunate to have their stories throughout the years. It makes me also wonder though how many stories are there out their untold. How many people have had their own experienc- es throughout the years that never have told their stories. Every time you board a plane now it seems like the first thing everyone does is put their headphones in and starts the movie on their phone or tablet. How many peo- ple are setting by some- one who has seen the world or who has expe- rienced something that can help that person, but instead that conversa- tion is missed because of the advancements in technology. Twenty years ago you had no other op- tion than to spend time talking to the person in the row next to you or I guess you could have your face in a book or newspaper. I am a peo- ple person I like to hear peoples stories about the experiences and every- thing else they have been through. There's so many great stories out there and every time I go on a plane and don't get to listen to someone's sto- ries I feel like I've been partially robbed. How many of those experi- ences though are right in front of our faces and we don't take advantage of it though. I guess what I'm thinking is to the younger generation take advan- tage of your elders and their stories. To the elders don't be afraid to tell your story because there's a good chance someone wants to hear it. Anyways have a great week and God Bless.

stalks. They will also be expelled during dry times, but typically will turn brown, persist through winter, and eventually break apart into tiny, hairy seeds. If you're lucky, your cat will carry one into the garage and play with it long enough on the rug in front of your house entry door and scatter the fine fluff to the point a leaf blower is even useless.

Yes, as a woodwork- er I've used sycamore in various projects. Quar- ter-sawn sycamore is valued for its distinctive flake or ray fleck pat- terns, which are more pronounced than in plain- sawn cuts. The quality and consistency of these patterns can greatly influ- ence the visual appeal of the finished piece. Syc- amore as firewood rates somewhere between green ash and silver maple, but it needs to be seasoned as the wood actually holds a lot of wa- ter.

I'm sure ol' Zacchae- us wasn't too particu- lar about which tree he climbed, he just wanted a better view. But from my point of view, I wish he'd chosen a more land- scape friendly one.

Local News

by Teresa Kathke

Saturday afternoon, Mary's daughters Diane and Teresa stopped in to visit with their mother after attending an event where our former Onaga Herald editor, Joe Hard- er spoke about the his- tory behind printing the Herald. Joe has donat- ed two printing presses to the Historical Society that had been used in the past to print the paper in Onaga. Joe explained to a room full of local resi- dents how the machines worked to print the paper. For many years the paper was printed right in the Herald office before the paper began be printed in Manhattan and brought back to the office to be sent out.

Saturday evening, Mary McDougal's great granddaughter, Saman- tha Morehead and her family came to visit. Te- resa and Diane were still there and enjoyed visiting with them. Samantha is Teresa's granddaughter.
